White Plains is a city in Westchester County, New York, United States. It is the 29th-largest municipality in the state of New York, an inner suburb of New York City, and the county seat and commercial hub of Westchester County, a densely populated suburban county that is home to about one million people. White Plains is located in south-central Westchester County. Its downtown (Mamaroneck Avenue) is 25 miles (40 km) north of Midtown Manhattan.

The city's total population was 59,599 in the 2020 census,<sup>[3]</sup> up from 53,077 at the 2010 census.<sup>[4]</sup> According to the city government, the daytime weekday population is estimated at 250,000.<sup>[5]</sup>

History [edit]

Early history [edit]

At the time of the Dutch settlement of Manhattan in the early 17th century, the region had been used as farmland by the Weckquaeskeck tribe, a Wappinger people, and was called "Quarropas".<sup>[6]</sup> To early traders it was known as "the White Plains", either from the white balsam (Gnaphalium polycephalum) which was said to have covered it,<sup>[7][8]</sup> or from the heavy mist that local tradition suggests hovered over the swamplands near the Bronx River.<sup>[9]</sup> The first non-native settlement came in November 1683, when a party of Connecticut Puritans moved westward from an earlier settlement in Rye and bought about 4,400 acres (18 km²), presumably from the Weckquaeskeck.<sup>[6]</sup> However, John Richbell of Mamaroneck claimed to have earlier title to much of the territory through his purchase of a far larger plot extending 20 miles (32 km) inland, perhaps from a different tribe.<sup>[9]</sup> The matter was not settled until 1721, when a Royal Patent for White Plains was granted by King George II.<sup>[9]</sup>
